Kinetic Graphics System is a feature rich, high-end DOS based graphing and charting program geared towards desktop publishing. It supports a variety of hardware including the Number Nine graphics card in 256 colors. Outputs to slide makers, plotters, or laser printers. Kinetic also served as a graphics service bureau. Using this software, one could create charts and send the results directly to Kinetic for professionally printed 35mm slides or overhead transparencies. Kinetic Graphics System competed against other high end studio graphics packages such as Execucom Systems Impressionist, and Zenographics Mirage. The program is organized in to separate modules: System - File Management Words - Word charts Art - Drawing Graphs - Data charts Layout - Combination charts These were normally sold separately, however this set appears to contain all modules. This archive includes ten 360k 5.25" floppy disk images. Requires 256k of RAM, DOS 2.0 or higher.
