Rags to Riches: The Financial Market Simulation

A fun but ultimately too dry stock market simulation that tries to make trading stocks more fun by adding neat options like the ability to call your Mom for more money (EG), luxury goods you can buy with your hard-earned cash, and "score" given based on your net worth, with all financial and personal assets combined. The result is an average game that's neither realistic nor fun to play, that will give you a few hours of entertainment before it becomes repetitive.

Turrigan II, DOS Version. == Instructions == 1 - Extra it where you want it 2 - Edit turrigan.bat, change the folder patch to where you unpacked it 3 - run the game using turrigan.bat (it's also where you configure it) 4 - On first time, configure Input 5 - On first time, configure Video (Note to LCD users :: leave 60Hz default and also don't move the screen to center it in the second phase and instead just press [Enter] even if it's a little off, If you move it to center it there, then it will be totally broken in the game.) 6 - On first time, configure sound Note : If on the configuration screen you have nothing but blue and the word "joystick", then you did not edit the turrigan.bat file properly.
