A/UX 0.7

<http://vetusware.com/download/AUX%200.7/?id=15023>

This is the old 'source code' archive of A/UX revitalized and configured in an emulator. Amazingly it runs! It's Unix SYSVr2 for the Macintosh II. Hardware support is VERY limited, but it runs fine under emulation. There is no UI, it's all text based. Other than historical interest, nobody will want this, unless you are a diehard Unix fanboy.

Hard Disk Menu 4.1

To make it easier and more efficient for you to use DOS, we've created HDM IV. Like a restaurant menu, HDM (Hard Disk Menu) IV gives you a way to quickly choose among options. HDM IV allows you to bypass DOS and its difficult-to-understand conventions to do the things that make computing enjoyable and useful. Once HDM IV has been set up, to start your programs and organize your files, subdirectories, and hard disk, all you have to do in many cases is press one or two keys. Shareware.
