It may be that I suck at using the search function, but I'm needing some help finding some software I used to use but can't find now. One is an old disk utility called "Refresh." Don't remember who it was actually by but it would show each cluster of the disk as it read from the disk, and then rewrites it, checking the media, and they say also preventing data rot due to the magnetic domains fading. However, I believe it was 92kB and I used to keep it on a floppy disk. I found it on an old 286 computer that I was given back in the early/mid 90's.

Another something I'm looking for is low density floppy versions of many software titles such as MS-DOS. Some of my computer that I'm working on only have low density floppy drives. I know I'm not the only one though.

Maybe somebody can also tell me where the best place to post this is.
