Does anyone know how I can buy a 16 bit pc with a USB port. I want to run Voyetra SPG music sequencing software and that runs well on these old pcs.

Your best bet is probably eBay. Look at the reputation points and the number of buyers. It isn't a guarantee. I wouldn't go higher than $300 (three hundred) USD. The search term would be "DOS computers" Be extremely careful in any purchase on eBay. I haven't had a purchase online in years. However try BestBuy for a sure thing. One Of the modern system on DOSBox 0.74 should be fine. You can always return within 14 days!

You should probably try DOSBOX as Suggested and if you are on a Mac that has an OS before Catalina and at Least Snow Leopard you can get BOXER that is easy to configure, I am running Windows 3.1 on my MacBook Pro with Mojave, and with Dosbox you can even install S3 Video 256 Color Mode and Sound Blaster 16 Sound in Windows 3.1, I also set up Windows 3.0 with Vga graphics on my Mac using Boxer.

I haven't gotten the Windows 3.0 MME working yet but I read somewhere about not setting it up as Using VGA Graphics and that is what I did and it wouldn't load Windows after Setup.

You could save some money by buying a MacBook with something after El Captain but don't get one with anything after Mojave avoid the ones that have Catalina and especially don't get Big Sur. You can get a decent MacBook for probably 150 to 200 dollars on Ebay. 16Bit or well old 486 or less Machines will cost you a lot of Money now days, unless you just happen to find one locally that someone is getting rid of. I wouldn't try to get it off Ebay the shipping alone will cost a ton. Macbook's are a lot lighter.

Or you could install Linux and try this How to run Voyetra sequence Gold in
